There was a great game of baseball at the athletic field yesterday afternoon, when the colored team of Sanford played the DeLand colored team. The Sanford colored brass band accompanied their team, and added not a little to the festivity of the occasion.

The first two offenders against the game law were "scotched" the first of the week. They were John Hamilton and Gus Franton, two Daytona negroes, who were caught by the convict guard and deputy game warden, Charles Swartengren. These early sportsmen were "caught with the goods on", having several quail each. They plead guilty at the plea term of the Criminal Court on Monday and were fined $50.00 and costs each. This ought to be a warning to others who are tempted to shoot game before the season opens. The best way is to leave your gun at home, and then you will not be subjected to the irresistible temptation to violate the law. Every man who carries a gun into the woods before the season opens is guilty of a suspicious act—even if he doesn't see any quail.

Miss Anita Canova, of Rockledge, the accomplished pianist, played the accompaniment, as she also did on Wednesday night, when Miss Conkling again treated the audience at the Congregational church to a couple more solos at the meeting of a Sunday school conference that was held there that evening. It is understood that by requests these young ladies will make a tour of the East Coast, so that all lovers of music may have a chance to hear these accomplished artists.
